

Devil Pay for Them Groceries

CHARACTERS: 3

PROPS: grocery sack

COSTUMES: Street clothes

SETTING: bare stage

Narrator: Once an atheist lived next door to a devout little old Christian Lady. Nearly every day they exchanged words from their porches.

Lady: I'm a Christian and I say Praise the Lord.

Man: I'm an atheist and I say there is no God.

Lady: (louder) I'm a Christian and I say Praise the Lord!

Man: (louder) I'm an atheist and I say there is no God!

Lady: (even louder) I'm a Christian and I say Praise the Lord!

Man: (even louder) I'm an atheist and I say there is no God!

Lady: Praise the Lord (Less loudly) and Lord, I'm out of groceries and money. Please help me
(Goes inside of her house)

Man: (muttering to self) I'll show her there is no God (Goes home and packs groceries in bag and sneaks them over to her porch. Hides on his own porch to see what happens)

Lady: (Comes out and gets groceries) Praise the Lord!

Man: (jumping out) Ha. I told you there was no God. I brought you those groceries. Now what do you have to say?

Lady: Praise the Lord. God brought me groceries and made the devil pay for them.
